We lunched with the Achilles. The Matthews, the Dean Jays, the Dillons, and others were there. It was [redacted] enjoyable.

Eva and Bert Jolis came this afternoon to say goodbye and we shall greatly miss them.

Cousins Nathalie and Laura Barney had tea with us. They brought with them their friend the well-known painter, Romaine Brooks, who is somewhat disturbed because letters she wrote many years ago to D'Annunzio are now going to be published in the United States. Nathalie gave me a pamphlet she had published about the take-over of the Louisiana Territory from the French, on which occasion our joint ancestor, Judge William Miller, was the representative of the French, Spanish, and American Governments. She has lived in Paris uninterruptedly since 1909.
